Chapter 3: Cell Division

Mitosis produces two daughter cells that are genetically identical to the parent cell. During metaphase, chromosomes line up at the equator of the cell and spindle fibers attach.